HARRISBURG, Jan. 31.—(INS)— Only a small percentage of Pennsylvania communities have taken steps to utilize new and virtually unlimited taxing powers, it was reported today by the State Department of Internal Affairs.Preliminary data filed in a tax survey showed at least 15 municipalities have either adopted or proposed new levies under the local tax base broadening act of 1947. About one-third of the sub-divisions were reported to be relying upon amenue-ment taxes for additional revenue.
A number of local governments in western Pennsylvania, and at least one eastern community, planned to impose local taxes, the survey indicated. Per capita and wage taxes also were popular, the Department said.The Department emphasized that its survey was not complete and that some communities may have adopted or dropped levies since reports were made.Many local governments may have started action on tax ordinances "since there appears to be great interest on application of the revenue raising privileges," a spokesman said."At no time have communities shown more interest in legislation affecting them," he added, "but they are proceeding cautiously."Radical developments such as the now abandoned tax on newspapers in Chester were frowned upon, he added.Another reason for slowness in taking advantage of the tax law was administration changes this month. Organization meetings were held this month and most political sub-divisions have not had sufficient time to prepare tax programs. Many communities considering new levies will not act until March.Easton and Honesdale were believed to be the only communities that have adopted amusement taxes, the Department said. Easton city officials voted a 10 per cent amusement tax while the Honesdale borough council approved a similar tax plus an impost on theatre seats, the survey revealed.

European Experiences Are Recounted by Dr. MohrThe program at the weekly dinner-meeting of Bristol Exchange Club held at the Elks home on Thursday evening consisted of a lecture by Dr. Walter H. Mohr, professor of social studies at George School, Newtown. His subject was:
"My European Experiences."Dr. Mohr has spent 13 months in Europe as a representative of the Friend's Relief Service and was assigned to the British Military Zone near Duesseldorf in the Ruhr industrial area, for the purpose of supervising food and materials sent to that area from the United States by Protestant and Catholic relief agencies. Direct distribution was made by German agencies in that area.Said Dr. Mohr: "Increased production in all German industrial areas is the major factor to fight unemployment and the spread of inflation. We are thinking too much of the possibilities of the atom bomb instead of the efficiency of our own democratic system of building industrial potentials.""Food and money contributed by relief agencies can only hope to serve as a temporary measure in solving the present emergency in the occupied German areas, and if work can be found for the unemployed by reconstructing industrial sections destroyed during the war, then there would be no need for outside relief. Private intuition can out-produce, can bring more comfort and can distribute better than any other system.""The people of Europe today, marvel at the fact of what was actually produced in America in war materials when we were scared and how soon it was reduced to almost nothing just as soon as the war was over."The speaker was introduced to the club by Exchangee Walter Pitronka, with president David Hertzler presiding.

"BI-PARTISAN" EUROPEAN AID

One of the major disputes about the Marshall Plan continues to be over the question of who shall have charge of it.This is an issue which the public finds hard to understand.
From the citizens' point of view, it would appear that, if the program is a proper one, and if its general scope were defined by Congress, then it doesn't make too much difference which manager is assigned to supervise it.The issue goes much deeper than that.
As a matter of fact, the issue may be said to have been raised by General Marshall himself. He has virtually refused to have anything to do with the program that bears his name unless he is put personally in charge of it. He is willing to accept any sort of "front," in the way of an advisory board—so long as he doesn't have to take their advice, and can do as he places; but he has refused to consider any arrangement which places part of the final authority elsewhere.This is a stubborn attitude, and his mere mulish refusal to argue the matter has caused a good deal of trouble in Congress.
Moreover, Congress has not been satisfied with his explanation for his attitude, which is that since a part of the program bears on our diplomatic problems, he as head of the diplomats should administer all of it.Many have challenged this position. Senator Taft is among them. He has urged that some way be found to give Congress a voice in the administration—at least, that some of the power be lodged beyond the control of the State Department. There is a scheme called the Herter plan, after the Congressman (Mass.) who proposed it, which would set up a board of government officials and citizens to run the plan through a director. Ex-President Hoover has vigorously condemned any effort to operate the plan through the State Department.On the other hand, Senator Vandenberg, who until recently was the undisputed leader of the Republican Senators in foreign policy matters and is the one who dragged them a year ago into the so-called "bi-partisan" approach on these matters, has appeared to feel that it ought to be possible to work out a bipartisan solution to this problem.Recently supporters of Secretary Marshall, including such persons as Gov. Driscoll of New Jersey and William L. Clayton, advisor to the Secretary of State, have taken up this tag-phrase, and are urging that Marshall be given (in effect) a "bi-partisan" vote to run the program any way he wants to.A deadlock has thus arisen in which it seems perfectly obvious

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

The French National Assembly approved, 324 to 226, the Government's program to establish a free gold market and to allow Frenchmen to hold foreign securities. The Socialists reversed their previous stand and voted for the program.Two recent Russian notes protesting the reopening for American use of an airfield in Tripolitania and the presence of American naval craft in Italian ports will be rejected by the State Department. The Navy announced that about 1,000 marines would go to the Mediterranean soon to replace an equal number now serving in that area.The United States Consulate in Jerusalem declared that under a State Department order all American citizens engaged in warfare in Palestine would lose their citizenship. Britain announced at Lake Success before the Palestine Commission that she could not allow the formation of any armed militia in Palestine before the termination of her mandate.Undeterred by President Truman's challenge to Congress that it approve his demand for $5,800,000, to inaugurate the European Recovery Program or reject the project entirely, Republican leaders went ahead with plans to request at least a billion dollars from the requested total.An 18½% reduction in exports of petroleum products was ordered by the Commerce Department "in view of the serious shortage" of oil in this country.Also in Washington, the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy declared the United States must concentrate for the foreseeable future on the "uninterrupted" production of atomic weapons rather than on the peaceful utilization of atomic energy.

1,643,454 members and 3,000 new posts," Commander Healey said. "The American Legion now has an enroll-16,000 posts. The American Legion is now the largest veterans organization the world has ever seen.""Of this tremendous membership approximately 69 per cent repre-

They are now in the majority in The American Legion. By their over-cated that The American Legion is the organization of their choice.""Locally, too, The American Leg-

The 1947 enrollment of the Robert "We are now launching our 1948 great programs to be carried out in rehabilitation, employment, Amerithis job of working for a better and a secure America every veteran has a place in The American Legion."World War I veterans over 28 years built The American Legion into the great organization it is today. It is now up to the veterans of World War II to carry the ball from here.

They are the heirs of The Amer-activities."Membership is the deep well of strength of all American Legion accomplishments. We need every vet-

One of the five people who were injured in a two-car crash at Croy-day in Abington Hospital. This is the first motor accident fatality recorded by Penna. State Police at Langhorne barracks, occurring out-the area.

The deceased is:

Joseph Paul McLaughlin, Bristol

Pike and Hulmeville road.

McLaughlin had sustained a possible fracture of the skull, concussion and laceration of the left eyebrow, when the machine he was operating and another car crashed at the intersection of Bristol Pike and Cedar avenue, Croydon, a week ago.McLaughlin had been removed to Harriman Hospital and later taken to the hospital at Abington, where death occurred yesterday.According to Penna. State Police of Langhorne barracks, a car operated by Paul Leighton, 19, Maple Shade, was travelling west on Route 13, and Leighton made a left turn to enter Cedar avenue. McLaughlin was driving east on Route 13 when the crash occurred.Also in the car with Leighton were: Mary Foster, Maple Shade; Edward and Phillip Felicioni, 1053 Pond street. This group was also removed to Harriman Hospital for treatment. Edward Felicioni had a fractured right forearm, fractured nose, abrasions; Phillip, fractured right leg, abrasions; Mary Foster

FIFTEEN ADOPT LEVIES

Per Capita and Wage Taxes Prove Popular In Some Areas

By Suzanne Flick
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Jan. 31—(INS)—Only a small percentage of Pennsylvania communities have taken steps to utilize new and virtually unlimited taxing powers, it was reported today by the State Department of Internal Affairs.

Preliminary data filed in a tax survey showed at least 15 municipalities have either adopted or proposed new levies under the local tax base broadening act of 1947. About one-third of the sub-divisions were reported to be relying upon amusement taxes for additional revenue.

A number of local governments in western Pennsylvania, and at least one eastern community, planned to impose coal taxes, the survey indicated. Per capita and wage taxes also were popular, the Department said.

The Department emphasized that its survey was not complete and that some communities may have adopted or dropped levies since reports were made.

Many local governments may have started action on tax ordinances "since there appears to be great interest on application of the revenue raising privileges," a spokesman said.

"At no time have communities shown more interest in legislation effecting them," he added, "but they are proceeding cautiously."

Radical developments such as the now abandoned tax on newspapers in Chester were frowned upon, he added.

Another reason for slowness in taking advantage of the tax law was administration changes this month. Organization meetings were held this month and most political sub-divisions have not had sufficient time to prepare tax programs. Many communities considering new levies will not act until March.

Easton and Honesdale were believed to be the only communities that have adopted amusement taxes, the Department said. Easton city officials voted a 10 per cent amusement tax while the Honesdale borough council approved a similar tax plus an impost on theatre seats, the survey revealed.

Recounted by Dr. Mohr

The program at the weekly dinner-meeting of Bristol Exchange Club held at the Elks home on Thursday evening consisted of a lecture by Dr. Walter H. Mohr, professor of social studies at George School, Newtown. His subject was: "My European Experiences."

Dr. Mohr has spent 13 months in Europe as a representative of the Friends' Relief Service and was assigned to the British Military Zone near Dusseldorf in the Ruhr industrial area, for the purpose of supervising food and materials sent to that area from the United States by Protestant and Catholic relief agencies. Direct distribution, was made by German agencies in that area.

Said Dr. Mohr: "Increased production in all German industrial areas is the major factor to fight unemployment and the spread of inflation. We are thinking too much of the possibilities of the atom bomb instead of the efficiency of our own democratic system of building industrial potentials."

"Food and money contributed by relief agencies can only hope to serve as a temporary measure in solving the present emergency in the occupied German areas, and if work can be found for the unemployed by reconstructing industrial sections destroyed during the war, then there would be no need for outside relief. Private intuition can out-produce, can bring more comfort and can distribute better than any other system."

"The people of Europe today, marvel at the fact of what was actually produced in America in war materials when we were scared and how soon it was reduced to almost nothing just as soon as the war was over."

The speaker was introduced to the club by Exchangeite Walter Plitzonka, with president David Hertzler presiding.

One of the major disputes about the Marshall Plan continues to be over the question of who shall have charge of it.

This is an issue which the public finds hard to understand. From the citizens' point of view, it would appear that, if the program is a proper one, and if its general scope were defined by Congress, then it doesn't make too much difference which manager is assigned to supervise it.

The issue goes much deeper than that. As a matter of fact, the issue may be said to have been raised by General Marshall himself. He has virtually refused to have anything to do with the program that bears his name unless he is put personally in charge of it. He is willing to accept any sort of "front," in the way of an advisory board—so long as he doesn't have to take their advice, and can do as he pleases; but he has refused to consider any arrangement which places part of the final authority elsewhere.

This is a stubborn attitude, and his mere mulish refusal to argue the matter has caused a good deal of trouble in Congress. Moreover, Congress has not been satisfied with his explanation for his attitude, which is that since a part of the program bears on our diplomatic problems, he as head of the diplomats should administer all of it.

Many have challenged this position. Senator Taft is among them. He has urged that some way be found to give Congress a voice in the administration—at least, that some of the power be lodged beyond the control of the State Department. There is a scheme called the Herter plan, after the Congressman (Mass.) who proposed it, which would set up a board of government officials and citizens to run the plan through a director. Ex-President Hoover has vigorously condemned any effort to operate the plan through the State Department.

On the other hand, Senator Vandenberg, who until recently was the undisputed leader of the Republican Senators in foreign policy matters and is the one who dragged them a year ago into the so-called "bi-partisan" approach on these matters, has appeared to feel that it ought to be possible to work out a bi-partisan solution to this problem.

Recently supporters of Secretary Marshall, including such persons as Gov. Driscoll of New Jersey and William L. Clayton, advisor to the Secretary of State, have taken up this tag-phrase, and are urging that Marshall be given (in effect) a "bi-partisan" vote to run the program any way he wants to.

A deadlock has thus arisen in which it seems perfectly obvious

Mr. Myers and his daughter were employed in the Dublin pants factory, and apparently not feeling well, he decided not to go to work in the morning. His daughter, knowing him to have a heart ailment for which he had been receiving treatment since last fall, asked him if he felt ill or wanted the services of his physician.

How cold was it this morning? That is the question propounded about town today.

There were many different answers.

It depended where the thermometer was located and the hour at which it was read.

Some small businesses in Bristol were being curtailed today due to fuel oil shortage.

The weatherman said:

"Temperatures will average four to six degrees below normal for the season. A little warmer over the week-end but colder Tuesday and Wednesday. Snow in north portion today and in central portion Tuesday. Precipitation about one-half inch."

Mercury hit a frigid six degrees above zero in Philadelphia today for a new January 31 low.

The weatherman said even lower temperatures were expected and predicted snow for Eastern Pennsylvania on Sunday.

Last night, the thermometer read eight degrees above at South-west Airport and by two a. m. had slipped to six. The previous Jan. 31 mark of 7 degrees was set in 1935.

Hourly readings of the thermometer at the Rohm & Haas laboratory are not made on Saturdays. At the

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

The French National Assembly approved, 324 to 226, the Government's program to establish a free gold market and to allow Frenchmen to hold foreign securities. The Socialists reversed their previous stand and voted for the program.

Two recent Russian notes protesting the reopening for American use of an airfield in Tripolitania and the presence of American naval craft in Italian ports will be rejected by the State Department. The Navy announced that about 1,000 marines would go to the Mediterranean soon to replace an equal number now serving in that area.

The United States Consulate in Jerusalem declared that under a State Department order all American citizens engaged in warfare in Palestine would lose their citizenship. Britain announced at Lake Success before the Palestine Commission that she could not allow the formation of any armed militia in Palestine before the termination of her mandate.

Undeterred by President Truman's challenge to Congress that it approve his demand for $6,800,000,000 to inaugurate the European Recovery Program or reject the project entirely, Republican leaders went ahead with plans to cut at least a billion dollars from the requested total.

An 18½% reduction in exports of petroleum products was ordered by the Commerce Department "in view of the serious shortage" of oil in this country.

Also in Washington, the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy declared the United States must concentrate for the foreseeable future on the "uninterrupted" production of atomic weapons rather than on the peaceful utilization of atomic energy.

The World Day of Prayer

The committee-women for the local observance of the World Day of Prayer for Missions, under chairmanship of Mrs. Edward Klaiber, met on Monday to complete plans for this service. Young people, as well as men and women are invited to participate in this service of praise and worship.

A member of the committee stated that:

"It is significant, when men are realizing an increasing oneness with men in all parts of the world, that this observance should be taking place all around the clock on the first Friday of Lent, beginning with the Christians (80 per cent of the Islanders) of the Fiji Islands at the edge of the International Date Line. For four hours, the songs of prayer and praise will rise on continent and island, in 1965 languages and dialects. LEGION TO CONDUCT A MEMBERSHIP DRIVEWill Extend During Febru-

Named Chairman

MESSAGE OF HEALEY

Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, is planning an extensive membership campaign during the month of February. A committee has been named with Lawrence McCoy as chairman, the other members being Marvel Durham, Fred Bryner, Joseph Fischer, Neil Traas, Joseph Schreiber, Horace N. Davis, Jr., Robert Orrino, John Harman, I. Johnston Hetherington, and Hugh Daly.

Martin Healey, commander of Bracken Post, said: "Nothing in the history of veterans' organizations can parallel the record-breaking expansion of the American Legion last year."

"During 1947 The American Legion nationally gained more than 1,643,454 members and 3,900 new posts," Commander Healey said. "The American Legion now has an enrollment in excess of 4,000,000. It has 16,000 posts. The American Legion is now the largest veterans organization the world has ever seen."

"Of this tremendous membership approximately 69 per cent represents veterans of World War II. They are now in the majority in The American Legion. By their overwhelming affiliation they have indicated that The American Legion is the organization of their choice."

"Locally, too, The American Legion had a record-breaking year. The 1947 enrollment of the Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, was 659. "We are now launching our 1948 membership campaign. The objective is to break last year's record."

"World War II veterans are invited into The American Legion on a full partnership basis. There are great programs to be carried out in rehabilitation, employment, Americanism, national defense, child welfare and community services. In this job of working for a better and a secure America every veteran has a place in The American Legion. World War I veterans over 25 years built The American Legion into the great organization it is today. It is now up to the veterans of World War II to carry the ball from here. They are the heirs of The American Legion and its ideals and activities."

"Membership is the deep well of strength of all American Legion accomplishments. We need every veteran's membership because our future tasks are greater than ever before. In the fight to win a lasting peace The American Legion must mobilize every ounce of strength it can. Veterans of World Wars I and II, united in overwhelming strength in The American Legion, can win this fight."

MODEL LOCOMOTIVE

Model Railroads

MEMBERS PARTICIPATE

LANGHORNE, Jan. 31—A social meeting of Middletown Grange on Wednesday evening in the community house was climaxed by a covered dish supper.

Edwin P. Alexander, of Yardley, who is interested in scale modeling of model railroads, Speaking before about 80 members and guests, Mr. Alexander commented upon the value of having hobbies, and said he had been interested in making railroad models for many years. The large audience was much interested in a model locomotive and three or four cars he exhibited.

In response to roll call, members described trips they had taken by trolley or train. Jesse G. Webster, Hulmeville, told of a trip he had taken to California by rail some years ago, and Herman Heston described a trolley and train trip he took when a boy.

Declaring the trip provided him with many thrills, Mr. Heston said he went by trolley from Newtown to Doylestown, then made his way to Lambertville, where he boarded a train and went to Trenton.

Several of the members spoke of the electrification of the Reading Railroad some years ago, when a large number of persons made trips to Philadelphia to see how the new system operated. Harry Wilson spoke of the joining of the railroads of the East and the West. The locomotive used on that occasion is now on display in Sacramento, Calif.

The next meeting of the Grange will be held on Feb. 11, when County Agent William F. Greenawalt will be the speaker.

TRAVEL CONDITIONS

Barea, Wilson Ave.

LITTLE FOOD, CLOTHES

That hotels in general throughout Europe have little heat, households are short of fuel, and there is a scarcity of milk, sugar and meats in most of the European countries, is the information given by Arnold Barea, 1124 Wilson avenue, who has just returned from three months of travel abroad.

Mr. Barea, manager of the machinery department of Castle & Overton, N. Y., made a business trip overseas in the interests of that firm, returning on the "Queen Elizabeth." He travelled extensively in Holland, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Italy, Sweden and Finland. Mrs. Barea, who sailed with him, remained on the continent while her husband continued to the Scandinavian countries.

"Travel conditions are not so good as far as railroads overseas are concerned," he reports. "The railroads over there are lacking in sufficient cars and engines to make travel pleasant. The results of the war destruction of engines and cars can be seen at many railroad stations, especially in Holland and France, and in some parts of Italy."

As regards travel by train, Mr. Barea informs that the general strike in France tied up trains and made travel difficult. Individuals were forced to get around as best they could by buses or airplanes

1st Motor Accident Fatality Recorded in '48 by State Police, Langhorne

This is the first motor accident fatality recorded by Penna. State Police at Langhorne barracks, occurring outside of an incorporated borough in their area.

One Bucks Countian Is Among State Graduates

STATE COLLEGE, Jan. 31—Nearly 600 bachelor degrees and 65 advanced degrees were awarded this morning at mid-year commencement exercises of the Pennsylvania State College. Among the graduates is one from Bucks County, R. Jean Thomas, Langhorne, B. A. in arts and letters.

Dr. E. U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C., citing shortages of resources, homes, and inadequate education facilities, told the graduates that "all of these shortages provide us with a plentiful supply of problems on which to work with opportunities for growth in knowledge and capacity to serve."

Pointing out that the citizens of a democracy secure a freedom of thought and action that is unparalleled in any other system of government, Dr. Condon said there is a responsibility which must be assumed along with this freedom.

"It is a duty to be well-informed on all important issues of our time, national and international, and to participate vigorously in the growth of wise policy concerning them," Dr. Condon told the graduates.

Before Dr. Condon's speech, Rear Admiral C. W. Fox, commanding officer of the Naval Supply Depot, Mechanicsburg, in behalf of the Secretary of the Navy, presented a plaque to the College as an expression of appreciation for Penn State's participation in the Navy training program during World War II.

Bachelor degrees were conferred on 478 men and 115 women while 53 men and 12 women received advanced degrees. More than 430 of the graduates were veterans.

Reserve and regular commissions also were presented to 29 Navy trainees; two in the Marine Corps; and 13

RETIRE AND DIE

For the man who is wrapped up in his work retirement often shortens life, in the opinion of Past President Roger I. Lee of the American Medical Association.
A man's longevity is shortened when his main reason for existence is taken away from him.

There are, no doubt, exceptions to this rule. Men who have driven themselves too hard need to slow down in the sixties, and probably well before that. But the tapering off should be gradual, and it should not be complete.

Another exception to Dr. Lee's sound principle would apply to the man who found new work or an avocation, old or new, to fill the vacuum in his life left by the loss of his job. But too often the things a man always dreamed of doing when he had time prove less absorbing than the job he always dreamed of escaping. Instead of happiness, retirement too often means sinking into apathy and atrophy.

Neither business firms nor government, Dr. Lee believes, should encourage retirement of healthy employees at 65. Much less should they require it. And persons that age should be wary of retiring unless they are sure they have some interest that will fill their lives as well as their present job does.

People, he says, "must have some sort of job and interest.
They must have a feeling of sharing in achievements."

That is important at any age.
It is particularly important at the time of life when one's children have departed to form homes of their own, one's friends are deceased, and one's faculties are waning. It is better to die of overwork than of boredom.

HEAT FROM THE EARTH

Barely in the nick of time, judging by the trouble people in various parts of the country are having to heat their domiciles this winter, a new heating gadget called the "heat pump" was on public display for the first time on several days ago at the fifth annual refrigeration and air conditioning exposition in Cleveland.

The "heat pump" will go into production this year, according to the manufacturer. It uses neither oil, gas nor coal, but extracts heat from the earth or from ordinary tap water.

When installed in the basement of a house, the pump will draw heat from a tube buried five to 15 feet below the surface. This heat, which may be a constant 52 only a few feet below the surface of the ground, is extracted by the machine, boosted by compression and released in the same manner a refrigerator draws heat from the food compartment and releases it outside the box.

Apparently the pump is a sizeable gimmick. Electrical engineers say that to operate it will require approximately one-third the electric current that would be required to heat a home by direct application.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

It Ought To Stop

Washington, Jan. 31.
AT A recent White House press conference President Truman was asked this question: "Mr. President, have you given any thought to your 1948 running mate?" To this he naturally and smilingly replied, "No comment." There was nothing else for the man to say.

PERHAPS because there is nothing to say is why so many ridiculous things on this subject are being written and said. The two most absurd are: (1) That Secretary of State George Marshall is likely to be "drafted" for the Democratic vice-presidential nomination (2) that Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Frederick M.
Vinson is likely to resign from the bench in order to accept the same nomination. Certainly it is difficult to think of anything less likely than either. Yet, hardly a week goes by that one or the other of these reports does not appear in print.

that someone is going to have to back down.

Either Secretary Marshall is going to be told, as Hoover recommends, that he is to have no control over the program; or the various critics of Marshall's one-man control are going to have to contend with some sham of bi-partisanship in which a handful of other persons will have high-sounding titles, but Secretary Marshall will have the power.

If "face saving" is to be the question, a solution should be easy. But the real test is going to be a very simple question—when all the laws are passed and signed, is or is not Marshall going to have final authority over the program?

There are two reasons why any program which includes Marshall as one of the apparent partners in a cooperative "non-partisan" system of operating the Marshall Plan will never be truly bi-partisan.

One has to do with the personality of Secretary Marshall. He is a very stubborn man. He is determined to have his own way in this matter. He makes no bones about it—no one could have made more clear to Congress that he proposes to run the Marshall Plan the way he wants it run, regardless of whomever else Con-

The other is that Secretary Marshall is neither bi-partisan, non-partisan, nor impartial.

On the contrary, he is very much in the coming race for President—not, of course, for himself, but as a sort of unofficial campaign manager for President Truman.

As a matter of fact, General Marshall has been running interference for New Deal presidents for several years.

He personally, by helping suppress the Army report on Pearl Harbor until long after the 1944 election, and by compelling Roosevelt's opponent, Governor Dewey, to keep quiet about that report in his campaign speeches, probably did more than any other one man in the nation to re-elect President Roosevelt for his Fourth Term.

Secretary Marshall moved in as political advisor and "strong man" for President Truman about a year ago, and has carefully built him up to the point where many believe the President has a better than even chance of being re-elected.

It would be unfair to say that the Marshall Plan was invented ONLY because of its political value to President Truman while running for re-election. On the other hand, it would be childish to assume that the inventors of the plan were blind to the tremendous assistance which the program, with its vast expenditures and vaster economic powers, would be for the Truman candidacy.

Why should we kid ourselves?
IN SECRETARY MARSHALL'S HANDS, THE MAR-SHALL PLAN WILL BE NEITHER BI-PARTISAN NOR NON-POLITICAL.

LIKE A COIN, THE PLAN HAS TWO FACES. ONE IS AID TO EUROPE. THE OTHER IS AID TO PRESIDENT TRUMAN IN A DESPERATE, ALL-OUT STRUGGLE TO STAY IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

IT really ought to stop—not only because there is such a complete lack of foundation but because it belittles and embarrasses two men doing exceedingly important and difficult work. Also, it tends unnecessarily to confuse the public mind, never any too clear about public men and public affairs, anyhow. Nor does it reflect favorably upon either the intelligence or sincerity of those who sponsor and promote such ideas. It does seem that they must know better.

TAKE the case of General Marshall. More than a year ago, when there was strong sentiment for him as President, the General made an unadvised statement to the effect that it deserves to be recalled. He said: "I will never become involved in political matters and therefore I am not now, nor will I be available for any political office. The popular conception that no matter what a man says he can be drafted as a candidate would be without any force or effect with regard to me. I never could be drafted." The General said this with such conviction and such emphasis that since then literally no one has suggested him for the presidency. On the contrary, his declaration has been generally accepted as a final and complete elimination as a presidential possibility.

YET, despite this, here he finds himself constantly being referred to as a vice-presidential possibility.
Everybody knows he cannot be drafted for first place, but some insist on talking about drafting him for second place. It makes no sense whatever. And the same thing can be said of the "draft" Vinson talk.
Chief Justice Vinson occupies the highest and most dignified public office in the country—in some ways higher than that of President. Far removed from politics, he has a lifetime tenure. When and if he retires it is with full salary.

TO SUGGEST that the Chief Justice would resign from that high and secure post to accept a vice presidential nomination with certainly no better than an even chance of election is to suggest that there is something very wrong with his head. It is true that one of the Chief Justice's colleagues, Associate Justice William O. Douglas, is also boomed from time to time for the vice presidency, but not many take that seriously either, though it is recognized that Mr. Douglas loves the publicity and does not discourage the idea.

HOWEVER, that is very different from stepping down from this exalted bench to the lower position of Vice President (and it is a lower position)—even were election assured. So, while Mr. Douglas does not shrink from the suggestion and likes to have his New Deal and "true liberal" friends clamor for him, it is altogether likely he would shrink from this step if ever he has to make the decision whether or not to take it. Certainly, he hardly could step down with any semblance of dignity at the request of unscrupulous city bosses such as Frank Hague of New Jersey, and Eddie Flynn of the Bronx, whom we are now told are sending messages to him through the not too bright ex-Democratic chairman, Mr.
Gael Sullivan. The idea is that these politicians will next put pressure on Mr. Truman to ask Mr.
Douglas to run. This seems a position of justice of the Supreme Court should not want to occupy—or a President either.

AT Mr. Douglas's age—50—it is a great honor to be on the Supreme Bench. It isn't logical to think that a man deliberately would relinquish that honor for the insecurity of a political nomination to an office such as the vice presidency, the chief attraction of which is the ghoulish chance that a President may die in office. Yet there is a clamor for Mr. Douglas to do exactly that—a "clamor" organized by Mr. Douglas's friends who know from experience it is not offensive to him. Some of his colleagues take a different view. They hold that that sort of publicity diminishes the dignity of the court, diminishes its esteem in which it is held, clashes with the tradition of its aloofness from politics. And they would like to have it stopped.

RETIRE AND DIE

For the man who is wrapped up in his work retirement often shortens life, in the opinion of Past President Roger I. Lee of the American Medical Association. A man's longevity is shortened when his main reason for existence is taken away from him.

There are, no doubt, exceptions to this rule. Men who have driven themselves too hard need to slow down in the sixties, and probably well before that. But the tapering off should be gradual, and it should not be complete.

Another exception to Dr. Lee's sound principle would apply to the man who found new work or an avocation, old or new, to fill the vacuum in his life left by the loss of his job. But too often the things a man always dreamed of doing when he had time prove less absorbing than the job he always dreamed of escaping. Instead of happiness, retirement too often means sinking into apathy and atrophy.

Neither business firms nor government, Dr. Lee believes, should encourage retirement of healthy employees at 65. Much less should they require it. And persons that age should be wary of retiring unless they are sure they have some interest that will fill their lives as well as their present job does.

People, he says, "must have some sort of job and interest. They must have a feeling of sharing in achievements."

That is important at any age. It is particularly important at the time of life when one's children have departed to form homes of their own, one's friends are decimated, and one's faculties are waning. It is better to die of overwork than of boredom.

HEAT FROM THE EARTH

Barely in the nick of time, judging by the trouble people in various parts of the country are having to heat their domiciles this winter, a new heating gadget called the "heat pump" was on public display for the first time several days ago at the fifth annual refrigeration and air conditioning exposition in Cleveland.

The "heat pump" will go into production this year, according to the manufacturer. It uses neither oil, gas nor coal, but extracts heat from the earth or from ordinary tap water.

When installed in the basement of a house, the pump will draw heat from a tube buried five to 15 feet below the surface. This heat, which may be a constant 52 only a few feet below the surface of the ground, is extracted by the machine, boosted by compression and released in the same manner a refrigerator draws heat from the food compartment and releases it outside the box.

Apparently the pump is a sizeable gimmick. Electrical engineers say that to operate it will require approximately one-third the electric current that would be required to heat a home by direct application.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

It Ought To Stop

Washington, Jan. 31. AT A recent White House press conference President Truman was asked this question: "Mr. President, have you given any thought to your 1948 running mate?" To this he naturally and smilingly replied, "No comment." There was nothing else for the man to say.

PERHAPS because there is nothing to say is why so many ridiculous things on this subject are being written and said. The two most absurd are: (1) That Secretary of State George Marshall is likely to be "drafted" for the Democratic vice presidential nomination (2) that Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Frederick M. Vinson is likely to resign from the bench in order to accept the same nomination. Certainly, it is difficult to think of anything less likely than either. Yet, hardly a week goes by that one or the other of these reports does not appear in print.

that someone is going to have to back down.

Either Secretary Marshall is going to be told, as Hoover recommends, that he is to have no control over the program; or the various critics of Marshall's one-man control are going to have to contend with some sham of bi-partisanship in which a handful of other persons will have high-sounding titles, but Secretary Marshall will have the power.

If "face saving" is to be the question, a solution should be easy. But the real test is going to be a very simple question—when all the laws are passed and signed, is or is not Marshall going to have final authority over the program?

There are two reasons why any program which includes Marshall as one of the apparent partners in a cooperative "non-partisan" system of operating the Marshall Plan will never be truly bi-partisan.

One has to do with the personality of Secretary Marshall. He is a very stubborn man. He is determined to have his own way in this matter. He makes no bones about it—no one could have made more clear to Congress that he proposes to run the Marshall Plan the way he wants it run, regardless of whomsoever else Congress puts in the picture.

The other is that Secretary Marshall is neither bi-partisan, non-partisan, nor impartial.

On the contrary, he is very much in the coming race for President—not, of course, for himself, but as a sort of unofficial campaign manager for President Truman.

As a matter of fact, General Marshall has been running interference for New Deal presidents for several years.

He personally, by helping suppress the Army report on Pearl Harbor until long after the 1944 election, and by compelling Roosevelt's opponent, Governor Dewey, to keep quiet about that report in his campaign speeches, probably did more than any other one man in the nation to re-elect President Roosevelt for his fourth term.

Secretary Marshall moved in as political advisor and "strong man" for President Truman about a year ago, and has carefully built him up to the point where many believe the President has a better than even chance of being re-elected.

It would be unfair to say that the Marshall Plan was invented ONLY because of its political value to President Truman while running for re-election. On the other hand, it would be childish to assume that the inventors of the plan were blind to the tremendous assistance which the program, with its vast expenditures and vaster economic powers, would be for the Truman candidacy.

Why should we kid ourselves?

IN SECRETARY MARSHALL'S HANDS, THE MARSHALL PLAN WILL BE NEITHER BI-PARTISAN NOR NON-POLITICAL.

LIKE A COIN, THE PLAN HAS TWO FACES. ONE IS AID TO EUROPE. THE OTHER IS AID TO PRESIDENT TRUMAN IN A DESPERATE, ALL-OUT STRUGGLE TO STAY IN THE WHITE HOUSE!

IT really ought to stop—not only because there is such a complete lack of foundation but because it belittles and embarrasses two men doing exceedingly important and difficult work. Also, it tends unnecessarily to confuse the public mind, never any too clear about public men and public affairs, anyhow. Nor does it reflect favorably upon either the intelligence or sincerity of those who sponsor and promote such ideas. It does seem that they must know better.

TAKE the case of General Marshall. More than a year ago, when there was strong sentiment for him as President, the General made an unsolicited statement on this matter. It deserves to be recalled. He said: "I will never become involved in political matters, and therefore I am not now, nor will I be available for any political office. The popular conception that no matter what a man says he can be drafted as a candidate would be without any force or effect with regard to me. I never could be drafted." The General said this with such conviction and such emphasis that since then literally no one has suggested him for the presidency. On the contrary, his declaration has been generally accepted as a final and complete elimination as a presidential possibility.

YET, despite this, here he finds himself constantly being referred to as a vice presidential possibility. Everybody knows he cannot be drafted for first place, but some insist on talking about drafting him for second place. It makes no sense whatever. And the same thing can be said of the "draft" Vinson talk. Everybody knows he cannot be drafted for first place, but some insist on talking about drafting him for second place. It makes no sense whatever. And the same thing can be said of the "draft" Vinson talk.

TO SUGGEST that the Chief Justice would resign from that high and secure post to accept a vice presidential nomination with certainly no better than an even chance of election is to suggest that there is something very wrong with his head. It is true that one of the Chief Justice's colleagues, Associwhen he was in France, or take a chance on reaching destinations by train. This greatly hampered schedules. At the same time, strikes were carried on by postal and telephone employees, making the situation in France difficult.

As regards food, Mr. Barea claims he personally could find no fault as he was entertained usually by his customers. "But in general, the food situation is not so good," he advises. "There is a scarcity of milk, sugar and meats in most of the countries except Switzerland and Belgium. . . . Living costs in France are high, but in Italy they are reasonably cheap. Of course much depends on the exchange. In Sweden, Finland and Switzerland the standards are more on a par with ours."

Europe has her own fuel problem. The Barea report that hotels in general are "cold," and that there is usually no hot water to be found in them. "In parts of the continent the suffering is severe. In sections of Holland the ration is about 1500 pounds of coal per household for the winter, regardless of the size of the house. The householders try to conserve by having fire only during the evening. Most of the homes have stoves, there being very few central heating systems."

But the clothing situation is listed as the worst of all. "Everybody is in need of clothing," the Barea report. "Clothing is very high. A man's suit which would cost $50 to $60 here costs $200 in France today." Then added Mr. Barea: "Women in Paris don't wear long skirts. Whether this is due to the shortage of material, or the fact that the fad did not start with the Parisian fashion designers, is not determined."

As regards the devastation in Europe, the Bristolians say that Hollanders are rebuilding their cities fairly well, and that rebuilding in parts of Italy is progressing. "They are hampered, however, by lack of materials. Most of the work at present is concerned with clearing up the rubble."

Travel Conditions Abroad Difficult

when he was in France, or take a chance on reaching destinations by train. This greatly hampered schedules. At the same time, strikes were carried on by postal and telephone employees, making the situation in France difficult.

As regards food, Mr. Barea claims he personally could find no fault as he was entertained usually by his customers. "But in general, the food situation is not so good," he advises. "There is a scarcity of milk, sugar and meats in most of the countries except Switzerland and Belgium. Living costs in France are high, but in Italy they are reasonably cheap. Of course much depends on the exchange. In Sweden, Finland and Switzerland the standards are more on a par with ours."

Europe has her own fuel problem. The Barea report that hotels in general are "cold," and that there is usually no hot water to be found in them. "In parts of the continent the suffering is severe. In sections of Holland the ration is about 1500 pounds of coal per household for the winter, regardless of the size of the house. The householders try to conserve by having fire only during the evening. Most of the homes have stoves, there being very few central heating systems."

But the clothing situation is listed as the worst of all. "Everybody is in need of clothing," the Barea report. "Clothing is very high. A man's suit which would cost $50 to $60 here costs $200 in France today." Then added Mr. Barea: "Women in Paris don't wear long skirts. Whether this is due to the shortage of material, or the fact that the fad did not start with the Parisian fashion designers, is not determined."

As regards the devastation in Europe, the Bristolians say that Hollanders are rebuilding their cities fairly well, and that rebuilding in parts of Italy is progressing. "They are hampered, however, by lack of materials. Most of the work at present is concerned with clearing up the rubble."

Ten days were spent by Mr. Barea in Finland, where he found the Finnish people very optimistic, even though they were "hard hit," and have a large reparations debt. "The people of Europe are looking to the United States. They feel this country is their only salvation, economically and politically. They feel we are the only ones who can help them."

A campaign to remind Americans of the advantages they enjoy and the opportunities that are offered every man, woman and child by reason of living in the United States is being launched this month by Kiwanis International and Kiwanis Clubs throughout the country.

The Kiwanis Club of Doylestown will take part in this program which will carry the title, "It's Fun to Live in America".

A series of 12 pamphlets will be issued by the participating clubs for enclosure with payroll checks, statements, sales letters and other circulars and communications, distributed in and out of Doylestown. Each pamphlet will be different in its contents.

Kiwanis President Frank T. Reynolds, of the Doylestown club, said today that millions of copies of the pamphlets will reach the people of America within the next 30 days.

"It is believed that a great cross section of people will be reached, people who normally do not give much thought to the advantages of our American way of life as compared with the advantages of other lands," Kiwanis Reynolds said today.

Few Communities Take Advantage Of Taxing Powers

Ambler, Meadville, Pottstown, Lancaster and Duryea have proposed amusement taxes to boost revenues. Duryea officials have considered a $25 levy on pin-ball machines. A $5 impost on shuffleboards and juke boxes and a flat $300 fee on the borough's one theatre, according to the Department.

Duryea officials also suggested a $2 a year levy on telephones to be paid by subscribers, a $3 impost on all light and power meters, $5 on power transformers and boosters and $25 on each taxi-cab.

Coal imposts, the Department said, were being considered or had been adopted by the following towns: Reilly, Schuylkill County; Robinson, Allegheny County; Lawrence, Clearfield County; East Pike Run, Washington County; Dunkard, Greene County; Horton, Elk County; Hopewell, Beaver County; Sewickley Borough, near Pittsburgh, and Brookway, Jefferson County, also studied the coal tax.

Per capita levies were being studied by Corry, Coatesville, Oil City, Port Allegany, Scranton and North Belle Vernon, the Department added.

Wage taxes were either under consideration or had been adopted in Johnstown, Scranton, New Castle, Monessen and Coraopolis. A $10 juke box tax was dropped by Harrisburg when theatre managers protested.

Easton officials were scouting a real estate transfer tax and an increase in service charges on garbage and ash removal and sewage treatment.

Butler officials have studied a possible mercantile tax while Coatesville taxing authorities have considered a one mill levy on retail sales and a half-mill on wholesale transactions.

ROHM & HAAS TO PLAY K. OF C. V ON HIGH SCHOOL COURT

The Rohm and Haas team will defend its first place position in the Bristol Basketball League tonight when it meets the Knights of Columbus five on the high school court.

In the second contest, the Profy five will meet the Hibernians. First game gets under way at 7:30 o'clock sharp.

Should the Knights beat the chemical mixers, there will be a certain three way tie for first place between Rohm and Haas, Fifth Ward, and the winner of the Profy-Hibs game. The Knights would also be close behind the league leaders.

The Knights will have its full line-up of such players as Joe Quigley, Bob Bonner, Stan Lelinski, John Kain and "Vince" Profy while the Rohm and Haas team will feel the loss of Carl Bontemps who has been transferred to another plant.

"Augie" Everett, "Bill" McConnell, "Chuck" Klein, "Ed" Mazzanti, and Bob Anderson will be the starting Rohm and Haas five.

The Profy team will be seeking its sixth straight triumph against the Hibernians. The clubs are de-dedicated for third place at the present time, one-half game behind Fifth Ward and a full game behind the leading Rohm & Haas club.

Johnny Slaven, Ralph Cahill, Joe Roe, "Easy" Mama, and "Al" Burton will start for the radiomen with Johnny Rodgers, "Bill" McGerr, Joe McDevitt, Jesse Vanzant, and Joe Elmer being the choice of Manager Peter Harkins of the Corson street aggregation.

It was announced today by Frank C. Hilton, State Commander of Veterans of Foreign Wars, that Commander C. A. Schweizer of the Chester W. A campaign to remind Americans of the advantages they enjoy and the opportunities that are offered every man, woman and child by reason of living in the United States is being launched this month by Kiwanis International and Kiwanis Clubs throughout the country.

The Kiwanis Club of Doylestown will take part in this program which will carry the title, "It's Fun to Live in America."

A series of 12 pamphlets will be issued by the participating clubs for enclosure with payroll checks, statements, sales letters and other circulars and communications, distributed in and out of Doylestown. Each pamphlet will be different in its contents.

Kiwanis President Frank T. Reynolds, of the Doylestown club, said today that millions of copies of the pamphlets will reach the people of America within the next 30 days.

"It is believed that a great cross section of people will be reached, people who normally do not give much thought to the advantages of our American way of life as compared with the advantages of other lands," Kiwanian Reynolds said today.

Fuel supply continues to be a paramount question in the Bristol area and with the drop in temperature it is again expected there will be an increased demand for fuel.

There is a slight shortage of coal in this vicinity but enough to keep everyone warm if people don't exceed a normal surplus in their bins. was the consensus of three major coal dealers today.

All were in agreement that there was as much coal this year as last, but due to the oil shortage a greater demand for coal was noticeable. Also causing a slight shortage this month was the unusual January demand. It was stated that 20% of the coal used by consumers in a normal year was used this month.

Individual coal companies reported thus:
One company has enough pea coal, but is short on the other sizes, such as stove and chestnut. Pea coal is apparently plentiful.

Another company has on hand a large amount of pea coal and experienced difficulties replenishing their stove and chestnut sizes.

A third company is not experiencing too much scarcity, and should they run into a shortage it was said it could be alleviated. If the people would order their normal amounts and not
